

Jennifer Duke Anstey

Artist Statement

Jennifer has been a photographic artist since 1979 when her father gifted her an SLR film camera. Having had a very diverse career path, thanks to the Covid shut down in March 2020, she has returned to full-time artist.

"I become disillusioned with traditional photographic imaging in 2009.

What's been missing, for me, is the ability to show the emotion of the moment and the passage of time within the image. Currently, I have been experimenting primarily with Intentional Camera Movement and iPhone photography, as I can edit and capture my mood within the minutes following the making of an image.

Being an old-school film photographer, I have fully embraced all that the digital universe has to offer.

The journey continues."

"The true horizon surrounds the observer and is typically assumed to be a circle drawn on the surface of a perfectly spherical model of the relevant celestial body." -Horizons, Wikipedia
