Commentary on Learning with Mrs. Batson

In the years I've been in art classes I've learned a lot. My teacher, Mrs. Batson was always there to give me advice and constructive criticism when needed, and it has helped me become a better artist. In my art classes, I've gotten to use many different mediums that I probably would never have been able to use without them. Because of the ability to explore many mediums I've found ones I really like, for example, charcoal, clay, and different types of sculpture, like installation pieces.

Artist Statement

This piece is a portrait of the Marvel character, Loki. I've been a fan of Marvel ever since the first Avengers movie but have never really made any art of it. I enjoy making some form of art of my current interest so I can look back on them. As soon as I realized I hadn't done anything from Marvel, I knew it had to change. When I finally watched the Loki series, I knew I wanted to draw him, due to his visually pleasing character design and my love for the character. I chose charcoal because I hadn't used it in a while and wanted to try it again.
