Under Ms. Wilk's guidance, I was able to understand how to use watercolors to effectively replicate scenery from throughout my life. I was taught techniques in how to layer watercolors, as well as the best ways to create textures. Combining this newfound information with the use of the design process, I created a work that I can be (and am!) proud of. My watercolor pieces were made on 5" x 7" watercolor papers, and collectively took about a week of in-class time to make. I chose snapshots from both a rare moment: my time at the beach, as well as one that I get to witness every morning: the view from my porch.
